SCOPE AND CONTENT

This collection documents the history of the Wurlitzer Company. Material in the collection spans 1860-1984, although information prior to 1899 is sparse. The collection is organized into eight series: Historical Publications and General Corporate Records, Subsidiaries, Employee and Production Records, Sales and Publications, Products and Publicity, Photos and A-V Material, Maps and Charts, and Organ Drawings. There is a possibility that material will be added to the collection at a later date.

The HISTORICAL PUBLICATIONS and GENERAL CORPORATE RECORDS series is divided into three subseries. The Historical Publications subseries contains the Wurlitzer family's genealogy, written histories of the company and informational pamphlets distributed by Wurlitzer. This subseries gives the researcher a brief, overall history of the Wurlitzer Company. Additional information of this sort can be found in boxes 30-33. A second subseries, Reports and Surveys, includes annual reports and the president's reports to the board of directors. Surveys and studies conducted on a variety of topics are also in this subseries. Topics covered range from potential market surveys to stock holdings report to property value studies. The third subseries consists of Financial Records. Ledgers, financial statements and audit reports dating 1899-1950 documenting the company's financial status are located in this subseries.

The SUBSIDIARIES series is also divided into three subseries. Records in this series are from the many subsidiary companies Wurlitzer controlled. The type of records included in this series are ledgers, journals, minute books and stock certificates. The first subseries is the Rudolph Wurlitzer Manufacturing Company's records. It was a subsidiary located in North Tonawanda, New York. In the 1930's the manufacturing Company became Wurlitzer's North Tonawanda Division. This subseries also contains the records from the Manufacturing Company's predecessors: the North Tonawanda

Barrel Organ Factory and the DeKleist Musical Instrument Manufacturing Company. The second subseries consists of the records of the Apollo Piano Company, the DeKalb Piano Company and the Wurlitzer Grand Piano Company. All three subsidiaries were located in DeKalb, Illinois, and became Wurlitzer's DeKalb Division in the mid-1930's. Additional Subsidiaries make up the last subseries.

EMPLOYEE and PRODUCTION RECORDS are divided into two subseries. The Employee subseries consists of employee expense reports, records from the employee cooperative store and from the Wurlitzer insurance fund. Records in the Production subseries contain shipping lists, invoice registers and document the company's operations during World War II.

The SALES and PUBLICATIONS series has a subseries for each subject. Most of the Sales subseries contains reports on Wurlitzer retail stores from around the country. In addition, it includes material on sales of instruments involved in patent disputes. The Publication subseries consists of magazines and newsletters published by the Wurlitzer Company.

Records in the PRODUCTS and PUBLICITY series are organized into two subseries. The Products subseries contains product catalogs, advertising, testimonials and instruction manuals. The material is arranged by product with musical instruments preceding non-musical items such as radios and refrigerators. Catalogs from the nineteenth century are also in this subseries. Newspaper clippings, ad campaigns and material on the company's centennial celebration are in the Publicity subseries. Information in this subseries complements the material found in the Historical Publications subseries.

PHOTOS and A-V MATERIAL are divided into two subseries. The Photos subseries contains product photos and photos of manufacturing facilities. It also contains photos of employees, promotional events and retail stores, including the company's early Cincinnati headquarters. The number of prints in each folder is in parentheses following the folder title. In the A-V Material subseries there are films, tapes, slides and record albums. Memorabilia such as medals awarded at trade expositions and corporate seals are also in this subseries.

MAPS and CHARTS include organization charts of the Wurlitzer Company. The maps in this series are, primarily, of Wurlitzer's DeKalb facilities and include fire insurance maps detailing the sprinkler and sewer systems for the plant.

ORGAN DRAWINGS for the company's Mighty Wurlitzer theatre organs include installation plans for the various components. A separate listing of approximately 1200 drawings follows the inventory.

HISTORICAL SKETCH

The Wurlitzer Company began in 1856 when Rudolph Wurlitzer, a Cincinnati bank clerk, sold $700 worth of musical instruments he had bought from family and friends in Germany. The business was incorporated in Ohio in 1890 under the name "The Rudolph Wurlitzer Company." For the first fifty years, Wurlitzer was primarily a retail instrument business operating out of its Cincinnati Store headquarters. Although fire destroyed the company's headquarters in 1904, a new building was completed in time to celebrate Wurlitzer's fiftieth anniversary in 1906.

In 1908, the Wurlitzer Company bought the DeKleist Musical Instrument Manufacturing Company in North Tonawanda, New York. The Rudolph Wurlitzer Manufacturing Company continued production of automatic musical instruments: player pianos, military bands and pianorchestras. In 1910, the Wurlitzer Company bought the Hope-Jones Organ Company and began to manufacture unit-orchestra pipe organs at their North Tonawanda plant. These were pipe organs equipped with bells, gongs, horns and sirens. They became known as Mighty Wurlitzers and provided the musical background in silent movie houses all over the world and were also built for churches and private homes. In 1919, Wurlitzer bought the Melville-Clark Piano Company of DeKalb, Illinois. Wurlitzer pianos were then manufactured at the DeKalb facilities under a variety of names: the Apollo Piano Company, the DeKalb Piano Company and the Wurlitzer Grand Piano Company. Each name designated a different quality, price range and style.

With the decline of sales during the 1920's and 1930's, production of automatic musical instruments ceased until the manufacture of the first juke box in 1934. For a brief time, radios and refrigerators were made by the Wurlitzer controlled All-American Mohawk Corporation. It was not a successful venture and ended in the mid-1930's. Many of the Wurlitzer retail stores were, at that time, in bad locations and needed repairs. The solutions to these problems came about with a reorganization of the company in 1935. With the reorganization, many retail stores were sold, piano manufacturing was consolidated in DeKalb and many subsidiaries were dissolved or absorbed completely into the Wurlitzer Company.

During World War II, Wurlitzer halted production of musical instruments. The company's defense production efforts were recognized in 1943 and 1944 when its North Tonawanda and DeKalb plants received the Army-Navy "E" Award. In 1946, peacetime production resumed and the Wurlitzer Company introduced two new instruments: the electric organ (1947) and the electric piano (1954).

In 1956, the Wurlitzer Company celebrated its centennial. That same year a new plant at Corinth, Mississippi, was completed.

Later, plants were opened in Holly Springs, Mississippi (1961), Logan, Utah (1970) and Hullhorst, West Germany (1960). The new facilities replaced those at North Tonawanda and DeKalb. The North Tonawanda plant ceased production of juke boxes in 1974, becoming the company's engineering and research center. In 1973, the DeKalb plant ended production of pianos maintaining only marketing and administrative offices. In 1977, the Wurlitzer Company's corporate headquarters moved to DeKalb, including the engineering and research center from North Tonawanda.

Leadership of the company, after Rudolph's death in 1914, was assumed by his three sons. Each son acted as president and, then, chairman of the board, successively. In 1934, R.C. Rolfing was hired as vice-president and general manager. It was his reorganization that helped the company through the Depression years. Rolfing succeeded the last of the founder's sons in 1941 as president of the company and in 1966 as chairman of the board. Farny Wurlitzer, Rudolph's youngest son, died in 1972. Rolfing died in 1974 and was succeeded by A.D. Arsem as chairman of the board. W.N. Herleman, president of the company, was succeeded by George B. Howell, current president of the Wurlitzer Company.
